"Smoting" and Non-"smoting"

Some times I get angry at things that frustrate me. So I have to struggle with the line in our first reading, where the disciples were "rejoicing that they had been found worthy to suffer dishonor for the sake of the name" (Acts 5:41).

Imagine rejoicing over pain and suffering. These disciples had seen Jesus on the cross. When he rose from the dead, they began to see that his suffering was not a tragic loss, but a sign of his glory. And when they suffered because they believed in him, as in today's reading, they saw that as a way to imitate Jesus on the cross. Those who had followed him in life could also follow him to the cross.

Most of us today find ourselves suffering because we have done wrong. God does not use special interventions to smite sinners. Think of the times we were punished as a child. Think of the times we lost a friend because of a cruel remark. These are the result of our actions. These are sufferings that we would rather avoid.

Jesus, however, suffered for our sins when he was totally innocent. If he could do that, could we not accept suffering for our own sins when it comes? If we behave differently because of it, if we can grow to be better persons, then that suffering can be our way of accepting the cross.

Of course, not all suffering is caused by the sins of the person suffering. The suffering of the innocent is a great mystery, a cause for sorrow and a challenge to help where we can. But like growing pains, all suffering is a step to new life in Christ. And that is what Easter is about.

Tom Schmidt

Pastor's Letter

May 4, 2025

Dear Family:

New Testament writers often speak of the exaltation of Christ. His exaltation was the result of his obedience: when he accepted the cross rather than abandon his mission, God responded by lifting him up to rule over every creature. The resurrection, early Christians thought, was the most noteworthy sign of Christ's exaltation, but not the only one. Christ could still make his presence felt among humanity in the Spirit, through which he guided his Church and interacted with individual disciples. These signs of Christ's exaltation are the topic today.

Christ's exaltation is clearest in the second reading, when the author of the Book of Revelation describes heavenly worship. All the heavenly beings, as well as all of the human family, fall down to worship the Lamb of God. In this Sunday's first reading, the exaltation of Christ is more subtle. The first effect is the bold speech with which the apostles address their captors, proclaiming the Gospel to them as a defense. Throughout the New Testament, bold speech is a sign that Christ is at work in someone. The second effect is the joy the apostles feel at having been dishonored on Christ's behalf. They could see through their suffering and recognize the presence of Christ who was Lord even of their captors.

In this Sunday's Gospel reading, Christ's exaltation consists in his ability to surprise people with his unexpected presence. The hallmark of these visits was a statement of love, such as the one he shared with Simon Peter. For John the Evangelist, a critical aspect of discipleship was the search for signs of the exalted Christ still at work among his people. Giving witness to these unexpected visits was the primary way the faith was communicated. Just so today, we are called to pay attention to Christ's presence and share his love with all we meet.

Some questions for reflection:

Has the risen Christ ever made his presence known to you?

How has Christ communicated his love to you?

How can you help someone else seek the risen Christ?

Peace,

Fr. Greg

As we mourn the death of Pope Francis, let us join with Catholics worldwide in praying for the repose of his soul.
